former Iowa prison guard who was convicted of sexually assaulting a teenage inmate while working at the Oakdale Youth Correctional Facility in 2015 has been sentenced to 25 years in federal prison. Blake Edward Reichert, 26, received the sentence from U.S. District Court Judge Jon Stuart Scoles on Tuesday. Reichert, who has been on supervised release since January 2016, confessed in a letter to his mother shortly before he was sentenced, according to the court documents. “I feel responsible for raping a teenage girl who was still in high school when I was working at Oakdale,” Reichert wrote. “I was the one who had her number and took advantage of her. I feel like this is why I got in trouble and she ended up in a mental health hospital.” Reichert was employed at the Iowa Department of Corrections facility between May and September 2015 and worked in a unit that housed male offenders ages 18 to 22, according to a 2015 complaint. Reichert was fired upon his arrest in late 2015. Oakdale is a maximum-security state prison in Storm Lake that houses more than 250 offenders. At trial, a former inmate testified that Reichert picked him up at a public library and drove him to a meeting with a female, who was undercover.

Once inside, the former inmate said he was told by the female, a friend of Reichert's, to go into a back bedroom. The former inmate said he was forced to do a nude handstand and that Reichert forced him to orally copulate him. While Reichert was on the stand, he admitted to the allegations made by the former inmate, according to court documents. In a letter he wrote to his mother before he was sentenced, Reichert said, "I apologize to you and everyone who's been so loyal to me." "I'm a bad person. And that's why I deserve to go to jail," he wrote. “I have scars on my mind and body. I’m not the same. I’m not the same and I don’t
