The present invention relates to a device for injection molding hollow bodies, having at least one mold moved in a closed position and an open position with a positive and a negative working and having at least one nozzle, which can be moved between an open position and a closed position. Many molding devices, in particular injection molding devices with multiple-cavity molds are known from the prior art. Such devices are known, for instance, by the designation HydraEase(copyright) injection molding system from Formfutur GmbH, which is described in the brochure xe2x80x9cHydraEase(copyright) Production Linexe2x80x9d (version 4.1). In this case, a supply of plastic granules is supplied to a hopper, which is arranged in the injection molding device, via a suction line and from which plastic granules are fed out to a metering device via a discharge line. The metering device is provided with two nozzles. To keep the plastic granules in place on the metering device, the metering device is surrounded by an annular flange, which closes the discharge line and simultaneously opens the suction line. By means of this annular flange, plastic granules present on the metering device are prevented from being discharged out of the injection molding device. Upon closing of the mold, the annular flange is closed by means of a slide device, the discharge and suction lines being provided with a transfer channel in the slide device. The slide device is also equipped with a corresponding discharge device, which is coaxially arranged on the discharge line and is movable between an open position and a closed position. This known injection molding device has the disadvantage that the plastic granules present on the metering device, which are prevented from being discharged out of the injection molding device, can be discharged out of the discharge line again at an undesired time. Accordingly, for instance, when emptying the injection molding device and when changing a mold, it may happen that the plastic granules are discharged out of the discharge line and are washed out of the injection molding device. It is an object of the present invention to provide a device for injection molding hollow bodies, which avoids these disadvantages. In accordance with the present invention, this objective is achieved by providing a device for injection molding hollow

The company has been making the jump into the 3D printing world for quite some time and the company's 3D printer is the perfect example of that. The company's 3D printer is called the DSM-110. The printer uses Z-Corp 3D printing technology and it boasts a print resolution of up to 600 x 600 microns. The printer itself is available in two models and the more common model is listed at around $14,500. The 3D printer is built on a micro-format dual extruder design. The printing itself occurs in twenty-five seconds or less and the printer can print up to a maximum resolution of 230,000 x 230,000 dpi. "Our three-layer selective laser melting 3D printer is perfect for printing in many different metals, such as aluminum, steel, copper, titanium and more," said the company. "It is the perfect tool
