Q: How do I disassemble my toe-in collar? I don't know the English name, but in German it's "Schweizerschaft". It basically is an air scoop / intake tube that in one of my BMWs is in place of the usual bumper. It was installed at the dealer and came off of the car about a month ago. The car was, however, used in such a manner that the engine hood was open, so the tool box couldn't be used. The side view part of the tube is held in with screws. Since there are no screws, I think I've got it off. The problem is, the side view tube doesn't pull off by itself. The tube sticks to the lower part of the car, making it impossible to pull it off. The top view is just fine. Does anybody have any experience with this on the internet?

A: A Schweizerschaft is a Kammühne, or "knee spoiler", that channels air to the engine bay through the bottom of the car, to extract air out of the engine bay. It is common to use them on larger engined cars, like the X5M and X6M, where there is a bigger area of the engine bay to channel air. There is usually a very small lip at the top of the knee spoiler to hook the spoiler onto the roof, this is the visible piece, the top view is not exposed. The side view, you can see this on the bottom of the knee spoiler. You can access the bottom from the outside of the car, where the paint has wear allowing you to get underneath it to access the hidden screws.

The upper part of the knee spoiler is still attached to the car (top view), and it is only when you remove the side spoiler that you 0cc13bf012
