That new panel is called the "Gang of Eight," and it includes nearly a dozen lawmakers from both chambers who claim to have a plan to deal with California's housing woes, none of which has gained traction with the legislature thus far. But they do enjoy a new and relevant prominence in the year's early news cycle. This new panel has also been called the "Trump Card" by the Los Angeles Times. While it is too early to tell how prominent this committee is in the making, its lead members are a group that was very prominent in the 8-year Obama Administration. As Representative Lee Zeldin, R-N.Y., told Breitbart, "They're basically the 'Trump card' on the table. Hopefully they can bring the Republican Party closer together, but we'll see." We expect to hear plenty from this committee's members in the weeks to come. But in the mean time, here's a rundown of the faces of 2017. We'll be updating this list as members of the House get more exposure. U.S. Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif. This member of the House Committee on the Budget is the ranking member on the Committee on House Administration. As the Ranking Minority Member on the House Administration Committee, Rep. Issa is the leader of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform. As a result of the Senate under-funding report in build a new Server. The new server was based on Windows Server 2008 R2, with all the hardware components upgraded to 2016. I also had to apply all updates, as this was the only point where it was the same as the previous server. [Diabetes mellitus in children]. The growing incidence of diabetes mellitus among children and adolescents is worrying, as is the growing prevalence of related complications. The substantial health consequences of the disease and its burden to the families is a challenge for all of the health care professionals, including pediatricians.

This article aims to increase the awareness of pediatricians about diabetes mellitus in children and adolescents as well as to help them give correct information and explain the pathophysiology to their patients and families.

Field of the Invention
The present invention relates to an image pickup apparatus. Description of the Related Art It is known that so-called pseudo color image pickup is performed in an image pickup apparatus using a color filter. For example, Japanese Patent Laid-Open

No. 2012-162062 discloses a technique for adding a pseudo color by canceling color misregistration that occurs when a pickup image of a white sheet and a pickup image of a black sheet are added together. In an image pickup apparatus using color filters, there is generally the case where colors of an image picked up by each color filter of R (red), G (green), and B (blue) are different.

Accordingly, when adding and displaying pickup images of white sheets and pickup images of black sheets by combining these images, this results in a problem of color misregistration of the images. More specifically, even when a pickup image of the white sheet is picked up using a light flux of color R, a pickup image of the white sheet picked up using a light flux of color B may be displayed with color B. The technique disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2012-162062 described above is intended to prevent the occurrence of color misregistration in a plurality of images by performing color misregistration correction between pickup images in a case where a plurality of pickup images for white sheets are combined. However, there is no description in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2012-162062 on preventing color misregistration in a plurality of pickup images of black sheets which are not corrected in a pseudo color image display mode where pseudo color images of two or more sheets are combined., 12 (d0c515b9f4

1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to the field of document processing and more particularly to document processing employing natural language processing.

2. Related Art There are many different and incompatible systems for processing information in the document processing field. One of the most common document processing systems is the database system. Data in the form of records is stored in a database. Access to the data is made using queries to the database which match data in specific records. Another popular document processing system is the document management system (DMS). There are many different software tools for generating documents. In the document management system, the output from a document generation tool is automatically added to a document library. A user can then browse through the output in the library. It is also possible to use a document management system to process the output of a document generation tool. For example, in a business-to-business document management system, corporate documents may be generated automatically at one company's location and stored
