Gensokyo Odyssey is a one-man game based on the concept of dungeon exploration. In the game, you take control of a little cube that navigates its way through the world of Gensokyo. You can knock blocks out of your way, mine for gems and use them to buy things in your shop. You can even change these in-game by talking to a NPC. You're given coins to spend on your shop's items, and you can also use these coins to buy 'Gems'. Gems in Gensokyo are thought to be the opposite of money, as your rank increases your ability to buy more and more gems. You need about 80 gems to buy a Mushroom Mushroom, but with enough gems, you can buy a rare item. You can also unlock titles based on the rankings of the items you purchase. Also, you can play with Gensokyo's NPCs. Every NPC can sell items, and you can talk to them to exchange items for experience points. You can also use the experience points to purchase new items. You can talk to all of the NPCs in the game, and the things they sell are different depending on their status (as seen by their portrait). If you get enough experience points, you can even become a Giant to be able to purchase some pretty epic items! Note: this game is currently in it's final form. It has only basic features and is missing areas. This is a game I have been working on for some time now. The main purpose of the game is to create something that showcases new concepts and new styles. The game is mainly multi-narrative, to introduce the player to different areas, characters and events that are already in Gensokyo. I've been putting in a huge amount of effort to make a unique game. Please be patient as this is something I want to do properly and not rush. The progress is not in a good shape, so if you think something doesn't make sense, feel free to shoot me a tweet. I'm always open to constructive criticism. This game is currently in an early alpha state, so some things are in a temporary state. Starting on December 1st 2017, I will be closing my Tumblr and Twitter account. The following were the original reasons I started this project. Don't worry, I'll be posting regular updates every now and then. Inspiration for this project was

What's new in Naval Hurricane:

Basketing or basketry is a craft, traditionally associated with women, that is used in a variety of ways for utilitarian and decorative purposes. Basketry is widely practiced in the art of basket making. To begin a project one assembles various items such as wire, reeds, and/or seed/gourd sago, or consists of the reed or sago itself; the next step is shaping the edges of the sago. Next is the sewing together of the various pliable materials. Finally the work of basket weaving and finishing may begin. Two different types of baskets can be used for various functions, such as storing food (food grade, non-food grade), for cooking and serving meals (kitchen grade), and to serve or store items (industrial grade). The size of a basket is generally determined by what is being stored, how tightly the container must be closed, the access or ease of handling, the function, whether the basket will receive direct sun, and the environmental protection desired. Also, practical use may determine the type of basket. History Basketry has existed as a craft as far back as humans have recorded history, providing protection from the elements in their travels or agricultural or for other utilitarian or craft purposes. The evolution of primitive baskets has changed little from the beginning to modern day. Additionally, in the many cultures a cosmopolitan group of basket types exist within a particular civilization. For example, in United States there are two types of baskets found, New Mexican or Navajo. Both these baskets are full ceremonial baskets generally employed for ceremonies. Other cultures employ baskets of more utilitarian purposes. For example, a Basketry student from Mexico would learn a decorative basket with striking shapes associated with the Chichen Itza civilization of Mexico. A basket from Indonesia or African may begin the individualized basket that of American crafts people. A warrior, farmer, and/or artisan basket may be performed. Basketry has experienced an upswing as the handicraft of a wide array of people in the United States who desire to participate in basketry. This political rebellion to the government's emphasis on "big business" has, in part, been the cause for increased construction in education. While it was once farmed, basketry as a craft is passed down. The old man, the grandmother, and the mother teach and master the craft to their children who then pass it on to the next generation. Types Cylind

The game was created in around 6 months. It is the first public version of a game that I've been working on for a few years. I hope people like it as much as I do. I hope you enjoy my little hobby. 2017/12/06 - Completed and uploaded. How to play: If you have trouble understanding the concept, it's hard to explain in just a sentence. I really recommend starting with the tutorial for a better understanding. That said, the game is played with the mouse. Try to run around the red circle while collecting food and water. Your health increases over time and you collect experience points when you eat, drink or sleep. You don't gain energy from food or sleep, though. When you've collected enough points, you level up. This gives you two health-based advantages. The upper limit for both health and experience points increases, and you gain a permanent stat bonus. To level up, press the up arrow key. After you've reached Level 1, you unlock the other levels by holding down the shift key. The shift key is used to start a new wave of enemies, which will spawn periodically. The enemies are all destructible, so you can eat them or use them for some other purpose. You don't need to collect all the enemies, but they'll deal a lot of damage if you let them stay. You can buy new items by using the coins you've collected. They can be used to put the target object into a different container. The icons on the bottom left indicate the containers. You're restricted in what you can do because of the nature of the container system. You can't go through walls, so you'll have to collect everything you want in order. You can also use the inventory in the upper left to switch between items. You can use items like the watch or the compass to move around. The left mouse button moves your character. You can use WASD or the arrow keys for movement. There's a tutorial for a better understanding of the controls. You can either hold down the ESC key to quit immediately, or you can wait for the game to finish. If you choose to wait, the game will automatically save every 100 games. Bug report: There might be a bug with the interaction with the update save prompt. It should not affect anything besides that, though. Because of the very limited power of my computer, I had to lower
