This is huge!.Functional outcome of surgical treatment of stenosis in superior vena cava-left atrial junction in patients with atrial septal aneurysm. In patients with atrial septal aneurysm, relief of the abnormal hemodynamics by surgical resection of the atrial septal aneurysm and atrioventricular canal leads to progressive dilatation of the left atrium, deteriorating the left atrial function and prolonging the operative course. The long-term postoperative outcomes, however, remain unknown. This study evaluates the hemodynamic changes in patients with superior vena cava-left atrial junction stenosis and its effect on the functional and hemodynamic status. From 1998 to 2003, seven patients (6 women and 1 man; mean age, 38.6 years) with atrial septal aneurysm and superior vena cava-left atrial junction stenosis underwent successful transeptal resection. The left atrial diameter was 28.1 +/- 4.0 mm before operation and increased to 37.3 +/- 8.3 mm at the time of discharge (P =.0003). The systemic venous pressures were decreased to 16.1 +/- 6.2 mm Hg (P =.0068) and left ventricular filling pressure was 19.1 +/- 6.1 mm Hg (P =.0051) compared with the preoperative values. The stroke volume index was significantly decreased from 81.4 +/- 11.2 to 68.2 +/- 13.4 mL/m(2) (P =.0429) and the ejection fraction was not changed. No atrial fibrillation was observed in any patient. The mean follow-up period was 28.6 +/- 15.1 months (range, 6 to 51 months) and there was no recurrence of atrial septal aneurysm or stenosis. Transeptal resection leads to improvement in left atrial function after repair of the atrial septal aneurysm.Q: jQuery: How to
