Standard pricing is just $100 more than it used to be. It's slightly more expensive than the standard upgrade from CS2 to CS3, but it doesn't necessarily cost much more. Most customers will find this upgrade package to be a pretty good deal. I don't know if this is a beta release but the new smart object behavior for expanding and collapsing doesn't work with the old workflow. I am faking it with smart object closure as the objects were already closed to begin with. I wish I was able to clone the object as it is supposed to be done by now. Meh - it's slow. And annoyingly, if you try to save the file that's locked up on your hard drive it doesn't show up in the list of files available for saving. Having to open the file and go into Edit → Undo pushes me away from using these features. Thanks so much for reporting the issue to us. I'm glad the ability to easily change the file type of your image is something you feel will be useful to you and your customers. For this feature to work under Windows, you need to use the Windows drivers for OneDrive, which are found in the following location: <http://go.microsoft.com/fwlink/?LinkId=259571> (In the downloads list, the latest version of the desktop app is "desktop.exe.") Why this whole process of deleting layers and properties? I'm happy to keep remembering what I deleted and move it (using the Search function), but why this whole thing about deleting and remembering? I'd be perfectly happy if I could just delete something and know I can't get it back. That would be better than this kind of "automated" work to "delete", "re-arrange" and "automatically" recreate what I deleted. It feels like cheating to me: you don't like it so you just "force" me to make it like you like it. I'm fine doing that, but it'd be nicer if I just had to acknowledge what I wrote: "Here it was, deleted by artist yesterday; we'll never see this again. If we need that again, we must remember how it was done." Is it nicer if you can't hear me say that? I guess it's OK if you can't hear me at all, but you're giving up an option, and when I do it, I always use the Undo button, because I'm not going to do something I don't want to do. You choose to not accept my "neutral" word-choice and make decisions for me.

This tab is to offer a number of prominent actions to edit photos, a change that occurs in the top of the Photoshop window when the users choose actions.
