Field of the Invention This invention pertains to a method for joining polymer components which utilize the specific application of laser radiation to cause welding. The laser radiation may be of the infrared, visible, or ultraviolet regions of the spectrum. 2. Description of the Prior Art In the past, welding has been accomplished by a number of different methods including electric resistance wire, fusion, flame and chemical spray application, etc. In spite of the varying methods, the elements or components to be welded generally have been of a like material, utilizing a chemical or fluxing agent to cause the like material to form a weld. Although the general welding process has been successfully utilized, the aforesaid processes require the use of expensive labor, and are limited to joining components of a like material. The present invention provides a means whereby components of dissimilar material may be joined utilizing a laser process. The process provides for a controlled, highly controlled, low temperature heat application which does not require a fluxing agent.Q: Cygwin & WorkingDirectory I am working on a project in my C# project in Visual Studio 2008.
